A Study of Disruption to Retailers on Supply chain due to Covid - 19 Pandemic

The pandemic continues to offer significant challenges for supply chains globally. Even in 2022, national lockdowns slow or even temporarily stop the flow of raw materials and finished goods, disrupting manufacturing as a result. However, the pandemic has not necessarily created any new challenges for supply chains. In some areas, it brought to light previously unseen vulnerabilities including staff shortages and losses due to closures. But overall, it has accelerated and magnified problems that already existed in the supply chain.
